Interior Window Refurbishment

Interior sash and case windows should be painted regularly to prevent deterioration of the timber and to improve their appearance. One of the main problems interior windows face is condensation. This can cause black mould (which is a serious health hazard) and the wood to rot.

We offer a full interior sash and case painting and refurbishment service that protects your windows against condensation & wood rot. Our interior sash & case refurbishment and paint service consists of preparing the original paint surfaces, treating any black mould, treating any rotted wood. The windows are then painted with PERMA-WHITE INTERIOR.

PERMA-WHITE INTERIOR stays fresher longer than normal conventional interior paints. Perma-White is a proven solution to the problem of mould and mildew build up on interior windows. Ideal for kitchens, bathrooms & bedrooms. The most common type of mould, black mould, actually thrives on ordinary paint film; especially in environments with high levels of condensation and humidity.

A typical interior sash window refurbishment and painting will involve

- poor and flaking paint is removed
- treat any black mould
- treat any rotted wood
- all areas are prepared by sanding to a smooth finish
- apply 1 coat of primer to bare wood
- apply 2 coats of PERMA-WHITE INTERIOR
- re-rope windows if specified
- replacing all the ironmongery if specified
- Install insurance compliance security locks if specified

SASH & CASE

complete solutions for your period sash & case windows

we specialise in restoring these old and rotted original sash & case windows back to a restored and fully working condition to last many more years

Sash and case windows can be centuries old but with modern restoration techniques these classics can continue to perform perfectly well for decades to come. We should save these original sash and case windows that are going to become extinct because people and companies are opting for new replacement cheaper windows.

Replacement windows, and there are plenty facts and figures on this, it costs less to restore an original sash and case window. You'll get more out of it over time than replacing it with a new window. Original sash windows help maintain historic appearance while replacements lose the integrity of the house to what it was supposed to be.

You should try to retain your historic windows wherever possible. Their complete replacement should be the very last resort and is rarely necessary. Even sash & case windows that appear to be beyond repair can be fully restored.

Old original sash and case windows were well made using slow-grown softwoods of excellent quality. They have lasted more than a hundred years, and with our knowledge and experience in the restoration of sash & case windows they can last for many more years.

Any window restored is the test of time on how good the tradesman was that restored it.

Jobs carried out cheaply and carried out with poorly thought-out repairs, or ones using unsuitable exterior materials, will very quickly fail in our climate. We set out a standard in restoring original sash and case windows that has been crafted over many years using only the best exterior materials available. We enjoy our work and get great satisfaction knowing that we have restored an original sash & case window crafted by tradesman more than 100 years ago back to a restored original fully working condition.
